Re: Your Chapter 11 Bankruptcy, case no. 10-19817-SJS

Sent via email to: arg@adamreedgrossman.com

Dear Adam,

You are no longer the trustee of your bankruptcy case as a result of the court order dated December 22, 2010 appointing a trustee (Mr. Ronald Brown; see attached) over your estate.

As you will remember, your ex-wife petitioned the court on October 22, 2010 to have a trustee appointed in your chapter 11 bankruptcy case.

Mr. Brown moved the Court to have an attorney appointed to represent him and Denice E. Moewes was appointed by the Court on Jan. 31, 2010 (see attached).

During a phone conference on Tuesday, February 1, 2011, between myself, you, Mr. Brown and Ms. Moewes, both Mr. Brown and Ms. Moewes provided the general opinion that you no longer have any authority to execute deeds or transfer assets. I am sure you remember them saying that you do not have authority to do "anything" other than to buy gas, groceries, and things of that nature.

Mr. Brown and Ms. Moewes were not then willing to authorize you to perform acts ordered by the state court and Ms. Moewes said that she needed time for further investigation to be able to provide more specific answers for whether and how you can comply with these orders consistent with bankruptcy law as applied to your case. I have not yet heard from Ms. Moewes regarding her findings.

I believe a realistic time frame for receiving those answers from Mr. Brown and Ms. Moewes is some time next week (perhaps February 7-11, 2011).

Finally, it seems a bit incongruous that your ex-wife moved for the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee and now is unhappy with that fact that you are not able to transfer property because you have a chapter 11 trustee. Go figure.

Sincerely,

Matthew D. O'Conner
